

MAKING OUR BEST AND BRIGHTEST THE BEST IN THE WORLD

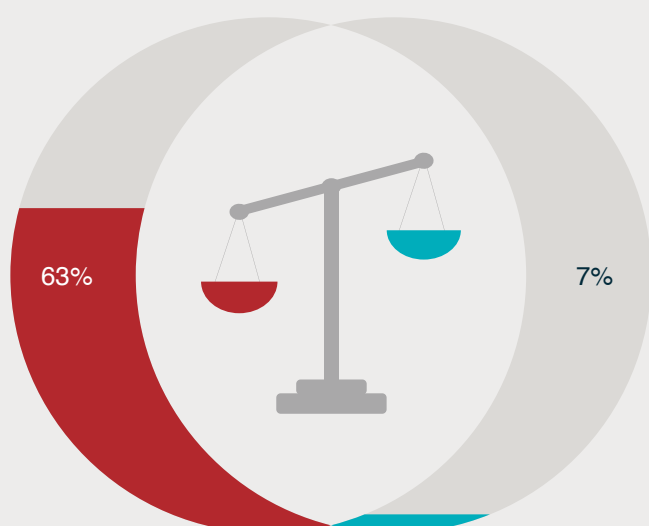

Results from PISA's 2012 assessment reveal how poorly America's high achievers compare to those in other countries.

We've made significant progress in preparing our lowest-achieving students to succeed academically, but we've neglected our brightest students.

It's time to make their learning a priority too.

Whom do teachers make a top priority?

Who is most likely to get one-on-one attention from teachers?
